WHAT IS TO BE ASKED ?
Architecture and Urbanism Beyond COVID19
:Open Call for Collaborative Research and Proposal

1. Aim and Direction

We see the norms of living together and looking back at the source of architecture and city in a daily life as the time of COVID19 pass by.

Mankind experienced in many of the great plagues and have emptied city but have life recovered persistently. What was the process like and how would COVID19 be different in this hyper-connected era?

Although future is more uncertain compared to other times, we should gather the anticipatory predictions and imaginations from vast number of people and use as compass to guide. Each one of us should draw a map of imaginary future together by gathering pieces that one observe calmly, record and reflect on the gap between built city and lived city in one's resident city.

In this Open Call, we hope to build a platform for public debate that jointly respond to urbanism and architectural crises through new questions rather than immediate solutions, cooperation rather than competition and open processes rather than results.
